Television has long been a part of life for people of all ages, and everyone has their favorite movies and programs. The information services are mainly staffed by journalists familiar with the secrets of the industry. Like the media, they are mainly involved in gathering and disseminating information. The information officer must be educated. That is, it is advisable to read every idea you want to say or write, first of all, from reliable sources.

- The responsible officer of the information service, no matter what the topic is, must first read with his own eyes the following three important sources of reliable sources;
- Methodological basis (opinions expressed in the works and speeches of the President of the Republic of Uzbekistan);
- Legal basis (opinions expressed in the laws of the Republic of Uzbekistan, decrees and resolutions of the President, decisions of the Cabinet of Ministers and other regulations);
- Theoretical basis (opinions expressed in scientifically based books, textbooks, manuals, articles and other written sources);

It goes without saying that a responsible official who speaks without reading these sources will make a mistake. It is unforgivable that the head of the Information Service, who has the right to speak on behalf of the head of the organization, makes a mistake. They will damage the reputation of the organization with that baseless, wrong statement.

The reason why television is more trusted by the public than radio and other publications is that it has a special "potential" to turn lies into reality that other media do not have. The viewer also perceives the false box presented on the screen as true.

In today's era of widespread development of information and communication technologies, foreign television programs are becoming a source of threats to political, moral, ethical and spiritual security, and television, according to objective and subjective factors, poses a threat to other media - the press, radio, even losing the lead over the Internet. It is no secret that due to the negative impact of foreign TV programs, there are some problems in the morale of the population, especially young people. In particular, it is worrying that phytism is becoming a tradition in the pursuit of luxury and "fashion", ornaments, and fancy fabrics.

It is known that parents give their children a heart, spend all they have for the sake of perfection, which is an ancient tradition of the Uzbek people. However, it is worrying that there are "TV viewers" parents who forget about the future of their children because of their captivity to television magic. Comprehensive study of the negative impact of foreign television on our national spirituality, especially on the upbringing of the younger generation It is necessary to develop a clear program of action.

In addition to the important role of the press, community and family in protecting the younger generation from negative media, if a parent watches a disruptive foreign show at home as an example, the child's psychological thinking will change immediately. The idea comes as far as possible.

Television brings together current issues of national need in society. It serves to increase the activity that we need in life and throughout our lives, it does not bore.
